GRAPHS AND LAUGHS

Topnotch Toil

May's employment numbers were excellent. The unemployment rate fell to 3.8%, a level last seen in 4/00! The unemployment rate for African Americans declined to 5.9%, the lowest level since record keeping began in 1/72, and the unemployment rate for women was 3.6%, its lowest since 1953! Lastly, the unemployment rate for those with less than a HS diploma hit 5.4%, a near record. The Fed raises rates next Wednesday.

Corporate Crisis

The rise in merger and acquisition activity that is pushing up share prices should allow 2018 to equal or surpass the M&A record high of 2007. This will saddle US firms with not only record debt levels, but debt of deteriorating quality. Add to that recently loosened banking regulations and normal late cycle over-exuberance, and we may be setting the stage for the next financial crisis; ballooning corporate debt.

Overwhelming Openings

When the Great Recession ended, there were 14.6 million unemployed job seekers in the US, but just 2.2 million job openings. The seekers/openings ratio was a dismal 6.6. Today, there are just 6.3 million job seekers and an all-time high of 6.7 million openings. There are now more job openings than job seekers. The ratio is at an all-time low of 0.9! In theory, there's a job for everyone!
